DEDUCTIBLE CLAUSE IS MADE MANDATORY

In a recent decision the State Corporation Commission ordered that deductible clauses be made mandatory in all fire insurance policies for windstorm and hail damage. The order was made immediately effective.

Both deductible and nondeductible policies for windstorm and hail damage have been available but under the new order fire insurance companies cannot write a policy without the deductible. Coverage on outdoor radio and television antennas and aerials are also excluded from the policies under the new order.

F. F. A. Honors Won By Appomattox Students

Blackburg, Va., June 25.- Tonight was "State Farmer" night at the first session of the thirtieth annual convention of the Virginia Association Future Farmers of America meeting held this week at Virginia Tech. One hundred and sixty-two of Virginia's top high school boys were elected to receive the "State Farmer" key, the highest honor the State Association can bestow upon its members in recognition of their farming accomplishments as well as other high school and community activities.

The following Appomattox County boys were on the list:

Richard W. Carson, Concord.

Boyd W. Fleshman, Jr., Appomattox

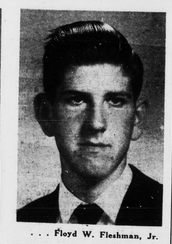
Alvan Franklin, Concord

Ralph Dillard Reynolds, Appomattox.

The Virginia Association has 190 FFA chapters with a paid-up active membership of 8,121. The number of "State Farmer" degrees that may be conferred any one year is limited to 2 per cent by constitutional provision.

In addition to the honors conferred upon the active members, 16 Virginia adults were elected to honorary membership in recognition of their contributions to Virginia's farm youth. Both the active and honorary degrees will be conferred during a special ceremony at the Wednesday night session.

. . . Ralph Dillard Reynolds



. . . Floyd W. Fleshman, Jr.

. . . Richard Krantz

Blacksburg, June 26.- Three of Virginia's farm youth received top FFA awards today for outstanding accomplishments in vocational agriculture at the Virginia Future Farmers of America convention in session this week at V. P. I.

Richard Krantz, of the Robert Lee FFA Chapter at Appomattox, was awarded a 10 x 25 foot trailer valued at $800, donated by a local manufacturer, for the purpose of helping an outstanding Future Farmer with limited capital get established in livestock or dairy farming.

Robert Lee Huddle, of George Wythe High School FFA Chapter, and Danny Woodrow Bird, Jr., of Grand High School FFA Chapter, each received $100 cash awards for doing the best work in livestock and dairy farming respectively from among the 8,062 members of the Virginia Future Farmers organization.

At the age of 15, young Krantz and his father bought a farm in Appomattox County in 1952, and started the dairy business. Prior to that time the elder Krantz was a tobacco farmer in Bedford County and received his main income by working off the farms. The father and son have a 50-50 partnership agreement covering all phases of the farm ownership and business. When they started farming in Appomattox County young Krantz owned one cow and calf and his father owned three cows and two heifers.

In the spring of 1953, they borrowed $4500 from the Farmville Production Credit Association with which to build a Grade "A" dairy barn. When they began selling Grade "A" milk in August of that year, they had ten cows and two heifers.

By the spring of 1955 they had built their dairy herd to 20 cows, 14 grade and six purebred. They planted 15 acres of corn to fill a silo which they were planning to buy. Hard luck struck them in June when they had their herd tested for Bang's disease and had to sell nine cows which reacted positively. This set-back caused them to postpone their silo plans.

They now have their herd rebuilt to 18 cows and nine heifers and hope to secure a silo to store the succulent feed they are now growing.

Young Krantz does not plan to go to college, but aims to become a tip-top dairy farmer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Krantz, of Appomattox County.
